

How to Stream DRM iTunes Videos Legally With Younity

July 01, 2014 - Younity announced that their media app supported steaming iTunes DRM-encrypted movies, TV shows and other media files now from iTunes to iPod, iPhone and iPad. It's unlike Home Sharing, Younity works even when you're not connected to your home network. And it requires no device storage. The whole process is completely legal.

Sometimes, we would lack of storage on our iOS devices, then we need to backup the iTunes library on our computer. Sometimes, we will want to watch the iTunes purchased or rented movies/TV shows on the iPhone/iPad on the go, then we need to stream some media stored on computer to the mobile devices. All these cases can be easily resolved by Younity.

But as everyone knows, iTunes videos are encrypted by Apple's Fairplay DRM protection, so you have few things to know before using Younity.

- * We won't optimize (transcode) streaming the same way we do with your non-DRM video, this results in a full resolution stream that can be slower than normal video playback;
- * We'll play your video in your device's Safari web browser, not within our iOS app;
- * Younity will not let you share iTunes purchased video because of DRM;
- * you might need to get your Apple ID keys onto your device if you've never used them for video

How to use Younity to Steam iTunes DRMed Media

You install the Younity desktop client on your Windows or Mac machine, then let it scan your hard drive (or the folder/s of your choice) for media. While that's happening, you install the app on your iDevice. Once everything is done, run the app and check the Videos section. You should see, among other things, all iTunes purchases that have been downloaded to your computer. Those which are DRM-protected will have a small thumbnail badge designating them as such.

When you tap a DRM video, Younity will open a Safari browser tab and play it there. (Other media plays within the Younity app proper.)
